“What’s a Tree Done for You Lately?”

Educational Poster

Introduction: Children are often misinformed about our natural resources through the media and biased educational materials. In an effort to make children aware of the abundance and importance of America’s forest resources, the Indiana Hardwood Lumbermen’s Association (IHLA) and Indiana Tree Farm Committee have developed a poster that informs children about forest management and forest products.

General Features: The poster, appropriate for elementary school children, shows the students what a tree provides for them every day. The title of the poster is “What’s a Tree Done for You Lately?” and features a large hardwood tree. Windows located throughout the tree’s canopy can be opened to reveal various forest products and tree functions that children use or benefit from daily. The back of the poster lists facts and figures regarding Indiana and U.S. Forestry, highlighting the fact that our forests are renewable and well managed.

Application: The IHLA poster was designed for primary grades. However, these high-quality educational posters are useful for all elementary school children, scouts, or other community groups.

Cost: Posters are available for a special price of $1.50 each (plus shipping) with a minimum order of 10 posters. For further information, or to order posters, contact: IHLA, 3600 Woodview Trace, Suite 101, Indianapolis, IN 46268; phone (317) 875-3660.
